Background:

grew up in small towns in South Carolina, where my family has strong roots to the land and its people. I majored in chemistry my first two years in college, but I quickly found that chemistry could get along just fine without me. I finished up in accounting, joined a Big-Eight CPA firm in Charlotte, and have been in Charlotte ever since. I've served Queens University of Charlotte for 29 years, as controller and now budget director. I also served on The Mountain's board, in the same role, 10 years ago.

What attracted you to The Mountain?

The scenic beauty without religious overtones.

What would you like to accomplish in your Board role? Help

The Mountain continue to serve its target audience (youth, UU groups & individuals, and anyone with the UU principles close to their heart), while extending its services to other audiences who appreciate the "nature glory" of the place and the respectful atmosphere here.

About your family:

John M. Fox, partner. I have two grown children – Andrew D. Webster, aged 30, and Rachel C. Webster, aged 24. They both got to know The Mountain through youth cons over the years.

What do you find most important in life?

Time spent with my grown kids, their kids, and my partner, reading/writing to clear the head and keep my values in focus, and romps in the woods.
